Dear Friends of Olbrich Botanical Gardens,

We are happy to report that Olbrich Botanical Society (OBS) met its budgetary goals in 2014. Thank you to everyone who helped us reach those goals. You made it possible by taking classes, sponsoring and attending events, and making gifts to OBS. Please take a look at the ten pages following this report’s narrative to view the many individuals and organizations who support Olbrich Botanical Gardens.

Olbrich Botanical Society board members and Olbrich Botanical Gardens staff continued their work in 2014, in partnership with the City of Madison, to plan the first project recommended in the facilities study (http://www.olbrich.org/about/expansionproject.cfm). The project is an Education Center with dedicated education space and a replacement Production Greenhouse to support the Bolz Conservatory and the outdoor gardens. Both the Olbrich Botanical Society and the City of Madison Common Council passed resolutions to that effect, and the City of Madison made a commitment of funds in the Capital Budget to be matched by funds raised by OBS. More to come in 2015!

Enjoy this Annual Report and the beautiful photographs taken by Olbrich Staff!

See you in the Gardens,

Timothy W. Sherry
Olbrich Botanical Society Board President

Strengthened by our Partnerships

Thank you to all of our community and corporate sponsors who supported special events and who helped with the success of the Gardens. Please see page 13 for a complete list of sponsors.

Olbrich Botanical Society and the City of Madison Parks Division partner in the operation of Olbrich Botanical Gardens. In 2014, the City of Madison spent $1,611,843 in operating expenses for Olbrich Botanical Gardens, which was offset by $337,019 in on-site revenues and resulted in a net expenditure of $1,274,823. In addition, the city of Madison funds capital maintenance for Olbrich Botanical Gardens. In 2014, heat retention curtains were replaced in the production house at a cost of $18,751, funded through the City of Madison Capital Improvement Budget.

“This place is excellent. Very, very impressed. Good job to all who are responsible. Very proud to have this as a part of Madison.”
— Mike C. (on-site comment card)

- Media Partners: In 2014, Olbrich received $99,206 in donated advertising and promotion – promoting both special events and garden visits.
- Olbrich participated in: National Public Gardens Day, Wisconsin Museums Week, Smithsonian Museum Day Live, Travel Green Wisconsin, Wisconsin Science Festival, NatureNet, Greater Madison Writing Project, and Wisconsin Invasive Species Council “Invader Crusader” awards ceremony.
- 650 people attended the Madison Public Library’s Fizz, Boom, Read! Collaboration 2014 Family Picnic and Concert celebration at Olbrich on August 5. The OBG Education Department provided a take-home activity as part of the event.
- Everyday that Olbrich Gardens is open to the public, volunteers welcome, engage, and assist visitors as well as help staff maintain the outdoor and tropical gardens and behind the scenes in the Visitor Center. In 2014, 605 volunteers contributed 26,480 hours of service. Of those 2014 volunteers, 82% volunteered at Olbrich in a previous year — a remarkable return rate. In addition, current volunteers show their broad-based commitment by supporting the Olbrich Botanical Society; two-thirds of our volunteers are also members. Volunteer groups contributed a total of 642 hours for special projects at Olbrich. American Girl, Edgewood High School, Madison Herb Society, RSVP of Dane County, and Wisconsin Garden Railway Society made significant contributions. A Code of Conduct for Olbrich Volunteers was adopted in 2014. It is a positive statement about Olbrich Botanical Gardens’ commitment to a safe and welcoming environment for all.
People in the Gardens

Olbrich counted 287,777 visitors in 2014, who entered between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. or attended public and private events. Visitors who take advantage of evening hours between April and October are not counted, which means the visitor count is understated.

- Rhapsody in Bloom 2014:
  Guests enjoyed the “Night Circus in the Gardens” theme, based on Erin Morgenstern’s book, The Night Circus. Guests dressed to the theme...black and white with a splash of red.

- The Children of the Rainforest program celebrates the cultures of rainforest regions around the world while educating visitors about the connection between plants and people. With support from Children of the Rainforest sponsor William Wartmann, Olbrich was pleased to offer free admission to organizations that serve Madison’s under-served communities. 75 individuals attended thanks to those partnerships. The 2014 season featured performances by Milwaukee-based Hale O Malo Polynesian Dancers and the Atimevu Drum and Dance Group from Madison, WI.

Comments collected from the visitor survey that was distributed after the Children of the Rainforest performances:

“This was great, especially in January.”
“Nice program for people of all ages!”
“This was amazing! Loved the show and the audience participation!”
“Thank you! It was a wonderful way to warm up on a cold day!”
“Great program, thanks for offering.”
Teaching About Plants and Gardens

- 382 adults and 27 children enjoyed free Outdoor Garden Strolls during the summer.
- 3,658 local and regional students, teachers, and parents participated in the grades K-5 Explorer School Programs.
- Children’s Kitchen Garden School Program: In collaboration with Madison School Community & Recreation (MSCR), approximately 150 grades 1-3 students from 6 MSCR sites participated in the Children’s Kitchen Garden School Program. 533 pounds of fresh produce were donated to Second Harvest Foodbank of Southern Wisconsin during the growing season.
- Youth & Family Classes: 73 classes (for ages 2 – grade 12) were offered; 950 people registered for these classes.
- Adult Classes: 133 classes were offered; 2,239 adults participated in these classes.
- Olbrich hosted the Greater Madison Writing Project’s (GMWP) Summer Teacher Institute, which immersed the participants in writing, reading, and teacher-inquiry workshops to prepare them to be writing teacher-leaders in their schools. As part of The National Writing Project’s widely recognized and successful model for K-16 professional development, the GMWP helps teachers across grade levels and subject areas learn strategies to teach students to become accomplished writers and learners. The program also creates professional communities that help teachers keep their instruction fresh and vibrant. In collaboration with the Greater Madison Writing Project, Olbrich co-hosted the second annual Young Writers Summer Camps from August 5-8, 2014, and August 11-14, 2014, and a one week High School Writing Camp.
- Olbrich participated in the WI Science Festival 2014 during October 16-19 by offering tropical conservatory guided strolls, outdoor garden guided strolls, and plant and gardening answer service, along with advertising our free outdoor gardens and opportunity to visit the tropical conservatory.
- Olbrich donated Blooming Butterflies admission tickets to the Madison Public Library Summer Reading Program; they were used as reading incentives, and the Madison Public Library (MPL) Summer Reading Program – Fizz, Boom, Read! collaboration held its 2014 Family Picnic and Concert at Olbrich.
- Olbrich Education secured official partnership status with the Badgerland Girl Scout Council and offered the program Plant, Water, Grow! for Daisy Scouts (grades K-1).
- NatureNet: Olbrich Education continues to partner with other regional nature-based organizations through the NatureNet consortium.
- Olbrich participated in the Ride the Drive event sponsored by City of Madison Parks in August.
Schumacher Library
Olbrich’s Schumacher Library staff and volunteers hosted 5,506 library users, answered 1,088 garden and gardening questions, and logged 1,316 volunteer hours.
Olbrich Garden’s Book Club (for ages 16 and up) has been gaining popularity. Attendance is usually from ten to fifteen people, which makes for lively conversations. The discussions are led by the Horticulture Librarian who provides potential questions, a bibliography, and other resources to prompt further exploration of topics. In 2014, the group discussed the following books:
Animal, Vegetable, Miracle by Barbara Kingsolver, Wormwood by Susan Wittig Albert, Wicked Plants by Amy Stewart, and Beatrix Potter’s Gardening Life by Marta McDowell.

Bolz Conservatory Exhibit
Innovations Inspired by Rainforests
November 1, 2014 – March 1, 2015
Visitors learned about what inspires people to develop cool gadgets, life saving technologies, and solutions to complex human challenges in the Bolz Conservatory. Rainforests are a treasure-trove of brilliant design and many inventions are based on nature. The slippery inside of bottles and pipes mimic the slick leaves of the carnivorous Nepenthes pitcher plant. Coconuts’ buoyancy inspired life preservers carried on boats and ships. Security marks on bank notes to combat counterfeiting are inspired by the iridescence of butterfly wings.

These innovations are called biomimicry, a growing field that studies the technology of biology and emulates nature’s models, systems, and elements to solve complex human design challenges.

Participants were able to explore some of the ways rainforests inspired objects and processes that have improved our daily lives.
In the Gardens

- The 2013/2014 winter (aka the polar vortex) was one of the toughest in memory for the gardens’ plants. Mature Bald Cypress (Taxodium distichum) specimens were lost as well as countless individual perennials and grasses. Evaluating, rethinking, and replanting continued into 2015.
- The Respite Pavilion, funded by the Mead Witter Foundation, was completed along with garden enhancements and bulb plantings in the Serenity Garden Meadow. A patio was designed and installed adjacent to the Respite Pavilion and Serenity Garden.
- Due to roof reconstruction during 2013, two areas adjacent to the Visitor Center were redesigned and replanted – the Visitor Center Gravel Garden and the Morse Terrace Courtyard Garden.
- The Prairie Dropseed Meadow in the Perennial Garden was burned for the first time in early spring 2014.
- Jeff Epping, Director of Horticulture led an Olbrich/Burkhalter Travel Garden Tour to Thailand.

“Thank you to the Mead Witter Foundation for major funding of Olbrich Botanical Gardens’ Serenity Garden Respite Pavilion”

---

“I visited this weekend and was delightfully impressed with the gardens! I enjoyed the variety of types of gardens and it looked wonderfully maintained. Thank you for making it available for free!”
— (online comment)

“What a wonderful garden… World Class! Thanks!”
— (visitor comment card)
In the Conservatory

- Olbrich contributed 10 blooming orchids from the collection for display and judging in the Madison Orchid Guild’s booth at the Orchid Quest 2014 show and sale. Six of the plants received ribbon awards for their excellent flowers. Participation in the annual show has been a very positive community and professional activity for Olbrich.
- The greenhouse shade curtains in the propagation house and the production house were replaced. These curtains have a significant function in energy conservation and providing appropriate light levels necessary to the plants and crops grown in the greenhouse.

Architectural Lighting in the Bolz Conservatory

The north shore skyline of Lake Monona is now a little more colorful at night due to new architectural lighting in the Bolz Conservatory donated by Blizzard Lighting, LLC.

Dylan Jordee, a recent UW-Madison graduate and part-time Olbrich employee, proposed the project to Blizzard Lighting and Olbrich staff, and it was met with enthusiasm all around. His proposal was developed as a business school course project.

After receiving Jordee’s proposal, Will Komassa of Blizzard Lighting, who lived in Madison during college and was familiar with Olbrich, agreed to donate more than $7,000 of light fixtures. Jordee worked closely with Blizzard Lighting and Olbrich conservatory and maintenance staff to procure the proper fixtures, cables and accessories, and he was instrumental in the installation of all 32 fixtures.

When not programmed for a special event, the lights display a static single color or color combination from dusk to approximately 10 p.m. nightly.

Spring Show 2014
Dinosaurs & Daffodils
March 8 – 23

Visitors joined dinosaurs and wandered through a Jurassic-style spring! Olbrich’s Atrium was brimming with colorful and fragrant flowers, including: primulas, snapdragons, violas, and, of course, daffodils! The flower show also featured tropical plants from the Dinosaur Age, rustic backgrounds, and water features that transported patrons into another epoch!

“Your staff did an AWESOME job teaching our students about plants yesterday. Thank you so much! Our children loved the experience and learned so much!”
— (Email comment from an elementary teacher whose students participated in Botany Explorer.)

“The rambling gardens are a pretty place to stroll through in the warmer months, and the conservatory is an absolute oasis in the winter.”
— (from a blog post)

“I recently went to the botanic garden in Sydney, Australia. I was amazed to see that it did not come close to the design, visual impact, and beauty of Olbrich!”
— Sue F. (visitor comment card)
